Through a documentary analysis of the subject property, we reclassified $111,550 of the depreciable basis, 20.3%, into short-life 5-, 7- and 15-year property, in line with what a well-documented residential file of this kind typically supports. Of that, $83,200 comes from the purchase allocation, including the furnishings, dock and lift that conveyed with the sale, and $28,350 from the 2026 improvements.

39-Year, Straight-Line Building structure · Real property (§1250)	79.7%	$438,304.32
15-Year, 150% Declining Balance Site / land improvements	9.2%	$50,500.00
7-Year, 200% Declining Balance Equipment and tools (§1245)	0.2%	$1,200.00
5-Year, 200% Declining Balance Tangible personal property (§1245)	10.9%	$59,850.00

$111,550 reclassified into short-life property: 20.3% of the $549,854 depreciable basis now recovers over 5-, 7- and 15-year schedules rather than 39 years. The resulting tax benefit depends on your facts; confirm application with your CPA.

The property was acquired under a contract signed on 09/29/2025 and is projected to be placed in service in November 2026, so the 5-, 7- and 15-year property qualifies for 100% bonus depreciation in the year it is placed in service.

METHODOLOGY & ASSUMPTIONS

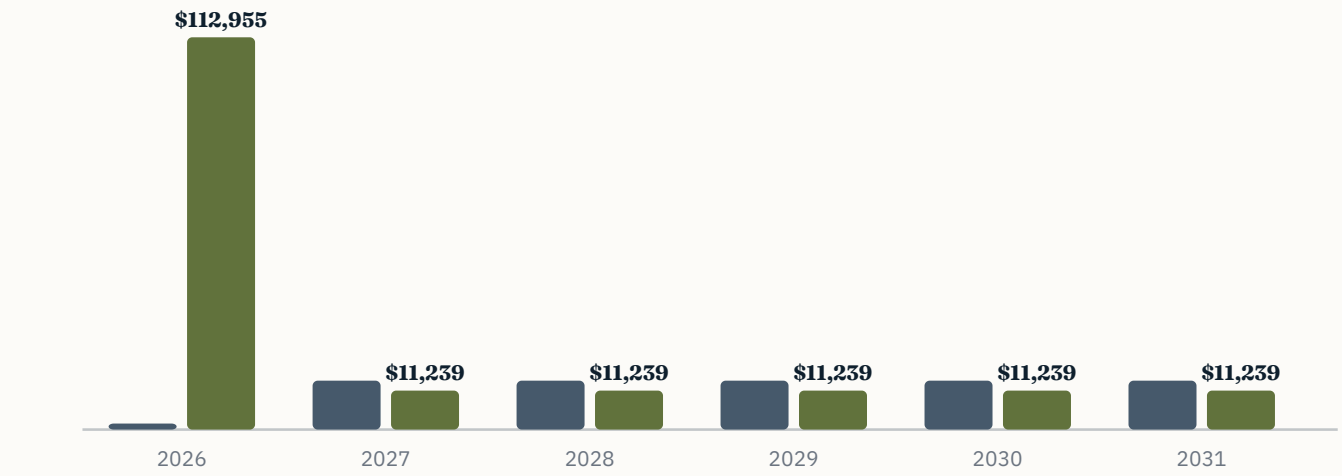

Illustrative only, not a promise of results and not tax advice. First-year savings equal the first-year depreciation acceleration (accelerated minus standard schedule) multiplied by the stated marginal rate, with bonus depreciation at 100% for property acquired (contract signed) and placed in service after January 19, 2025. The building is shown on the mid-month convention from a projected November 2026 in-service date; the preparer confirms the as-filed date and convention. Figures do not reflect passive-activity or material-participation limits, the short-term-rental rules, state income tax, or future depreciation recapture. Confirm treatment for your specific facts with your CPA.

Year 6 (2031)	$14,098.83	$11,238.57	($2,860.26)	$96,891.17

READING THIS TABLE

Standard: the whole depreciable basis on 39-year straight-line. Accelerated: 100% bonus on the $111,550 of 5-, 7- and 15-year property in year one, and the $438,304 building on 39-year straight-line. Year one is prorated for a mid-November start. After year one the accelerated schedule deducts less each year than the standard schedule, because the short-life property has already been recovered; the cumulative advantage declines over the holding period and reverses on a sale through depreciation recapture.

The Subject Property

In accordance with your engagement, we allocated the purchase price and the 2026 improvements across the appropriate MACRS recovery classes for federal income-tax depreciation, reconciled to your documented depreciable basis.

A note on the land

Land does not depreciate and is excluded from the allocation that follows. The land share is the county assessor's ratio from the 2025 property tax bill: assessed land $120,000 of $328,000 total, 36.6%, applied to the $728,000 contract price plus $1,247 of capitalized closing costs. The lender's appraisal put the site at 40.3% of value; the assessor's ratio is the primary source and the appraisal is retained in the workpapers as a cross-check. Lake frontage (211.7 feet) carries most of the land value.

Inspection & documentation

This sample is built from the lender's appraisal (May 2026), the contractor's four-page invoice, and the owner's list of further improvements. The final study adds the owner's photo record, the closing statement and county records, with a documented tax-position and quality-control review before delivery.

Building recovery period

Transient short-term rental with an owner-reported average guest stay of seven nights or fewer: the building structure is recovered over 39 years (IRC §168(e)(2)(A)(ii)(I); a dwelling unit excludes units used on a transient basis). If the average stay exceeds seven days in a tax year, the preparer should reassess; at 27.5 years the reclassified amount is unchanged.

Asset Detail: Personal Property

Tangible personal property reclassified to 5- and 7-year recovery periods under IRC §1245, the fastest-depreciating assets identified in the study. The sale conveyed the cabin fully furnished, with televisions, grills, deck furniture, the dock and the boat lift; those items are carried at used fair value.

Judgment calls, stated plainly

Three items were kept in the building class even though some studies would move them: the standby generator (it serves the whole-house electrical system), the well pressure tank and sediment filter (part of the water supply), and the kitchen and bar countertops (attached to cabinetry). The sauna, the portable hot tub and their dedicated circuits are personal property because they serve equipment rather than the building. Carpet, furniture, televisions, grills and the three decorative fixtures are conventional 5-year items; the lawn mower and shed tools are 7-year equipment. Conveyed contents are valued at what they would fetch used, not at replacement cost, and the owner keeps the inventory.

Documentary support

Each line states its cost source: the contractor's invoice (four pages, $46,805) or the owner's reported cost. The owner keeps the underlying records. Every improvement on this schedule was contracted after January 19, 2025 and before the property was placed in service, so it is capitalized with the property and shares its in-service date. Three invoice lines marked OMIT were not performed and are excluded.

A documentary, ATG-aligned method

Our analysis follows the IRS Audit Technique Guide for cost segregation. We identify the building components, flooring, fixtures, appliances, specialty electrical and plumbing, and land improvements, that qualify for 5-, 7- and 15-year recovery, and we reconcile every allocation to your documented depreciable basis.

Cost basis & references

Each purchase-allocation component is priced from a residential cost library (R.S. Means) adjusted to the property's locality, with quantities taken from the appraisal, photographs and county records. Improvements are carried at invoice or owner-reported cost. Components are mapped to their CSI MasterFormat divisions, and the reference index appears in the appendix.

§1245 vs. §1250 property

Classification rests on a permanency test and a functional-use test: whether an item is an inherent part of the permanent structure, and whether it is movable or serves equipment rather than the building. Items meeting these tests are treated as §1245 personal property with shorter recovery periods.

Records & quality-control review

Regulations require records showing the cost basis and depreciation allowance for each item; this report supplies that schedule. Every file is reviewed through our quality-control process before it leaves Refined.

Review & Notes

Refined Cost Segregation confirms, except as otherwise noted in this report, that to the best of our knowledge and belief:

5. Our process, methodology, and quality-control review are applied to every file before delivery. The preparer and reviewer of record are named in the workpapers.

IMPORTANT: HOW TO USE THIS REPORT

Documented for examination. This report is prepared to IRS Audit Technique Guide standards, supported by workpapers, and quality-control reviewed. Do not file it with your tax return; provide it to the IRS only if specifically requested during an examination.

"Placed in service" means the date the property was ready and available for its intended use: for a rental, the day it was available to rent (listed or move-in ready), not the closing date. This report's depreciation schedules run from that date. A machine-readable fixed-asset schedule (.csv) accompanies every final report for direct import into depreciation software. This report is not tax, legal, or accounting advice.

Sample status. This sample precedes the inspection and the final invoices. Purchase-allocation amounts are modeled; improvement amounts are as invoiced or as reported by the owner. The final study may differ.
